The Olde Kings Arms

Stephen Myers is the Manager at The Olde Kings Arms public house in the Old Town, Hemel Hempstead. It is his responsibility to ensure this grade 2 listed building remains functional, conforms to health & safety regulations and provides a trouble free clean environment for its customers.

The pub has a regular flow of customers all day every day. The kitchen serves food for six hours each day which is high demand for such an old building. There are also eight guest rooms and a private flat within the building, all requiring the best standards of hygiene. Stephen understands that it is vital to uphold the reputation of the establishment and that any hygiene issues would lead to poor reviews.

Stephen needed a solution for the waste pipe system that could withstand the toll of a busy, daily flow of customers. Typical problematic areas for the pub were the gent's urinals and the kitchen drains which have to manage a high work load. The care taker was regularly using expensive bottles of chemical drain cleaning solution to unblock minor blockages. The pub also experienced a serious problem with a severely blocked drain in the ladies toilets which caused a terrible smell that made its way to the bar area costing several hundred pounds to resolve.

Stephen decided to take advantage of a biological drain cleaning service from BIO-ENZYM Ltd. One of our specialists attended the establishment and within an hour, application of powerful biological enzymes had been made with minimal disruption to the building. This process is repeated every six months.

Stephen saved the establishment well over 30% on its annual waste pipe system maintenance costs and even has a solution for all areas of the building, not just those problematic ones. He is now able to focus on more important issues at the pub safe in the knowledge that the aforementioned problems have been prevented, and in an ecological way. The care taker is now able to spend more time dealing with other issues this old building produces for him.
